About Group 64 Theatre for Young People

Group 64 Theatre for Young People (G64) is an inclusive young people's theatre company resident at Putney Arts Theatre. We focus on empowering young people and ensuring their voices are valued and heard, through a creative and safe environment. We work with young people ages 4-19.

We make theatre for and by young people. Over 200 young people take part in our youth theatre on a weekly basis. We run weekly theatre classes and holiday projects for children and young people, and opportunities to be involved in performance, directing and aspects of technical theatre.

We also have an education department, which works regularly with local schools, through enhancing their curriculum and inviting their children and young people to perform on our stage.

Our emphasis is on creative engagement and sparking the imagination, whilst developing theatre making and performance skills, both onstage and off. Our young people are an important part of the development of the company through a youth committee and our young directors programme.

We are dedicated to reaching and providing opportunities for children who have little access to the arts by offering free and assisted places. We regularly apply for funding so we are able to offer education projects to schools in areas of deprivation. We have also created an environment where children who have additional needs are able to access all our programmes.

Much of our work is focused around positive mental health and this will continue to be reflected in all our work going forward.

This is a challenging and exciting time to join our team, we are in the process of developing and changing at a fast pace to ensure we meet the needs of all young people.
